ELECTION FIGURES ARE STAGGERING

SHOWN TO HAVE BEEN PAID FOR VOTES IN PENNSYLVANIA

Secretary of the Treasury, Mellon, Declares That Primary Election Campaigns In the Keystone State Could Not Be Carried On For Less Money, Explaining That the Expenditures Principally Were For the Hire of Watchers and Advertising.

Testimony given Monday evening before the senate campaign committee carried expenditures in the 1926 Pennsylvania Republican campaign almost to the $2,000,000 mark. Total expenditures for Representative William S. Vare, winning candidate, were placed at $595,754.

The totals thus far established are: Pepper-Fisher ticket, $1,045,000; Vare Beidelman, $595,754; Pinchot $195,000. Total $1,835,754.

While the committee was unearthing details, Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of treasury, declared informally that he believed the committee would find the expenditures to have been essential under the prevailing system.

At the same time Representative Thomas L. Rubey, Missouri, Democrat drafted a constitutional amendment under which persons spending huge sums for their election would be barred from congress.

Rubey would limit senators to $10,000 for the primary election and general election, and members of the house to $5,000.

For five hours the senate investigators pounded away at two witnesses who are associated with the so-called Grundy political organization in Pennsylvania. The investigators learned that the president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' association supplied cash up to a total of $381,575 in such sums and at such times as the citizens' committee supporting the Pepper-Fisher ticket needed it.

Swinging into another right session, the committee sought information on the expenses in Philadelphia and eastern Pennsylvania of Representative William S. Vare, victor over Senator George W. Pepper and Governor Gifford Pinchot in the three way senatorial contest.

Secretary Mellon, who returned to Pittsburgh just before the May primary election to make the first political speech of his life, talking for the Pepper-Fisher ticket, gave his observations on the expenditures in response to persistent inquiries from newspaper correspondents who crowded his office at the treasury for a semi-weekly conference.

The secretary declared that a primary election campaign in Pennsylvania could not be carried on for less money than was expended, explaining that the expenditures principally were for the hire of watchers and for advertising. He added that watchers were indispensable under the Pennsylvania system and were authorized by law.

Advertising to the pay of $10 a day to watchers at the polls, Mr. Mellon said he considered that to be fair compensation for a day's work.

The secretary estimated at $42,000 the cost of mailing one letter to each voter in Pennsylvania, and said that where one candidate resorted to newspaper and other advertising, all of them would be obliged to do likewise.

The constitutional amendment, which Rubey said he would introduce in the house, would declare that congress "shall have power to prevent fraud and corrupt practices in the nomination and election of senators and representatives."

Members of the investigating committee declined to comment on the proposal or to express any view as to whether or not it would meet the situation developed by the inquiry. They explained that they were sitting as judges in this case and would refrain from discussing it or matters pertaining to it.

NIFTY REFRIGERATOR.

Fred Fissell, of "The Hole in the Wall," has something new in the refrigerating line to keep drinks cool. The apparatus was recently placed on the market by the Liquid Carbon company of Chicago, Illinois. Mr. Fissell is the first dispenser of ice cold drinks to put one of the cabinets in use. It holds sixty-four bottles of pop. It has eight tubes and each has a capacity of eight bottles. When a customer desires a drink, a bottle of pop is placed in the machine and out at the other end of the tube comes an icy cold bottle.

RAISING STRAWBERRIES.

Besides running a newspaper, J. W. Johnson cultivates a strawberry patch in that portion of the city called "Beantown." Last Saturday he brought in a quart of mammoth berries of the Grubb variety, that for size and weight beat anything we have seen. One of the berries weighed one and a quarter ounces.

Columbus—Ralph E. Seiffer, Evansville, Indiana, captain of the Ohio State university 1925-26 basketball team was awarded the Western Conference scholarship medal today for combined excellence in scholarship and athletics.

Sandusky—Poison liquor was held responsible for the death of Dewitt Blackman, 45, Dayton, who was found dead last night in a cottage near Pipe creek. Shortly after Blackman's body was found, Horace Wetmeyer, an inmate of the Sandusky Soldiers' Home was arrested. Wetmeyer was ill from drinking poisoned liquor according to police. He will recover. The men were seen to have gone to the cottage together, officers said.

Portsmouth—Harold Tipton, of Portsmouth, died from a broken neck received when he dived into the Ohio river.

Hiram—Hiram college mourned the death of Dr. George A. Peckham, professor of old testament languages and literature, who died after a long illness.

Cleveland—Five children were rescued by firemen and nearby residents when fire destroyed the M. O. Desart home at Lyndhurst village near here.

Amherst—Bertha Ciberay, 10 and her brother, John 7, South Amherst, were found in an abandoned stone quarry near here yesterday afternoon.

According to the story told by playmates, Bertha stepped off a ledge into 15 feet of water. Her brother drowned trying to save her.

Columbus—Attorney General Crabbe today emphatically denied attempting to block a grand jury investigation of charges of graft in connection with the proposed purchase of an alternative site for the new state institution for the feeble minded.

Columbus—The state supreme court reversed the conviction of Solomon Peskin, Benjamin Karp and Merritt A. Vinson, of Cleveland, in connection with the failure of the Municipal Savings & Loan company in Cuyahoga county.

SENATOR IS SLATED FOR GOOD PLACE

John M. Vorys May be Appointed Assistant Secretary of Naval Aviation.

State Senator John M. Vorys, of Columbus, is slated for a $7500-a-year position as assistant secretary of the naval aviation. The place is created in the new naval aviation bill which is to be finally enacted this week.

There are a number of other candidates for the appointment but Vorys is considered the best qualified. He is 30 years old, a graduate of Yale university and served with distinction in the naval air service during the World War. He is a lawyer practicing with his father in Columbus. His law course was taken at Ohio State university. In 1921, he served as an assistant to Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes during the arms limitation conference in Washington. He was elected a Franklin county member of the Ohio house of representatives in 1922 and of the senate two years later.

JOSIAH KIRBY PLEAD GUILTY JURY FIXING

Sentenced to Two Years at Atlanta—Celebrated Case Drawing to a Close.

The celebrated Kirby case, which originally grew out of the collapse of the $38,000,000 Cleveland Discount company is nearing the end. Charges of conspiracy to influence prospective jurors called for service in the two federal trials of Josiah Kirby for alleged misuse of the mails, drew pleas of guilty from Kirby and five of the nine other defendants jointly indicted.

Kirby, who was president and the founder of the discount company, immediately was sentenced by Federal Judge John M. Killitts to two years in the Atlanta penitentiary and fined $2,500 on the conspiracy charge.

There are now two penitentiary sentences hanging over Kirby. The other for a period of seven years and a half was imposed after his conviction last March of mail fraud in connection with his operations as head of the discount company.

The court did not specify whether or not the sentences were to run concurrently, merely ordering Kirby to begin to serve his term between July 10 and 15.

With the five others who plead guilty the court was more lenient and the four remaining defendants, three of them women, were ordered to stand trial in September following their pleas of not guilty.

The five who admitted guilt were disposed of as follows:

Ben A. Williamson, former Cleveland newspaper man and later employed by Kirby, sentenced to one year and a day at Atlanta and fined $100.

Jesse Ledow, Mansfield attorney, five months in the workhouse and $2,500.

James Donovan, Mansfield politician, four months in the workhouse.

Bellman D. Jones, former Cleveland reporter, sentence deferred until September 20.

William R. Irvin, Akron attorney, six months in the workhouse and $750 fine for conspiracy and $75 for contempt of court.

The four to stand trial in September are:

Daisy Burneson, stenographer for a Cleveland law firm.

Mrs. Martha Ann Williamson, wife of Ben Williamson.

Meta Kretchman, Kirby's private secretary, and B. F. Gillmer, Warren attorney.

MOREHOUSE GIVES PLAN TO PROTECT PEOPLE FROM WILD-CAT PROMOTERS

American Bankers Association Official Who Has Exposed Fraudulent Schemes for Robbing Savers Draws Up Set of Rules to Foil Crooks.

By W. R. MOREHOUSE,
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association.

ARTICLE NO. IV

THE solution to the great problem of protecting savings depositors from losing their money in fraudulent schemes is largely in the hands of our bankers. If they will co-operate with those who save they can make it hard for these plunderers to continue business. Hasten the day when our bankers without exception will gladly welcome interviews with depositors who contemplate making investments, will urge an investigation or recommend in the stead of little-known securities investments of unquestioned responsibility. In every case where customers call at the bank excited and nervous over some scheme where by investing a few hundred dollars they expect to make thousands any banker will at once sense the situation.

W. R. Morehouse

The banker knows that the depositor is being rushed off his feet, with "Hurry, hurry and get in on the big clean-up!" and it remains for the banker to caution the depositor against such tactics. In order to prevent this all that our bankers have to do is to suggest that their customers make it a rule always to bring high-pressure salesmen to the bank to be interrogated regarding their promotions. This will break up sales nine times out of ten, for high-pressure salesmen invariably avoid being questioned too closely by bankers who know investments.

Rules to Follow

Our bankers should urge this investment slogan: "Investigate before you invest. Consult your banker first," and so indelibly impress it on the minds of their depositors that they will always be guided by their banker's advice in making investments. Salient points which should be kept before the investing depositor are:

(1) There are three cardinal points to all good investments, namely safety of principal, certainty of income and salability.

(2) Safety of principal is more important than a high yield; the promise of big returns is usually a sign of a risky speculation.

(3) It is like taking a leap in the dark to invest in promotions which are an unknown quantity and for this reason a thorough investigation should always be made.

(4) It is morally wrong, if not criminally so, for any person to invest in any proposition he feels is a skin-game, or which is tainted by trickery or fraud or opens the way for a favored few to "get in on the ground floor," clean up and get out from under before the scheme collapses. Usually the depositor finds he is not in on the ground floor, there is no chance for him to clean up before the scheme collapses and so he loses all that he has invested.

(5) If a promotion is as good as claimed, it would not be necessary for high-pressure salesmen to resort to all sorts of questionable methods, it would not be necessary to rush a victim off his feet and sign him up before he could interview his banker, but he could be given time to consult others before investing.

(6) The only reason high-pressure pirates go to those who are inexperienced in finance for funds is because they can palm off on them so-called investments which in the eyes of men of experience are valueless.

(7) The glib-talking promoter is not a true friend of the savings depositor but is a wolf in sheep's clothing, he will resort to any kind of trickery to exchange a certificate of stock for the depositor's cash, his glittering promises are fictitious and he is planning how he can entrap his victims and relieve them of their savings and not how he can make good dividends for them.

(8) For every oil well that pays dividends there are many dry holes and abandoned drilling rigs, and for every profitable mine there are many abandoned shafts, and for every successful promotion there are a thousand failures, and because of these facts the savings depositor's chance of winning is too small to justify the great risk involved.

(9) Savers should steer clear of stock, shares or units in world-revolutionizing inventions which are peddled in front of empty stores or sold from house to house or through the mails.

(10) Every novice investor should remember that, as in all lines of business, black sheep have invaded the investment field. They must be shunned, while investment firms and salesmen of responsibility and integrity should be supported.

Let our banks unite in a movement designed to protect the depositor against the schemes of the wild-cat promoter—in a movement that will save our savings depositors from despair and from poverty as a result of having lost all—in a movement that will turn into legitimate investment channels the millions of dollars which are now wasted on fraudulent schemes of one kind or another. The best service a bank can render a novice investor is to keep him from making poor investments by helping him to make good ones.

and Mr. Stanhope said that he was surprised that a woman with the good business judgment I had should be getting such a small income as those bonds paid—scarcely anything. He said that I should make my money work harder for me. He knew I must have good business judgment, he said, because I brought my children up so beautifully. He offered to take the bonds and change them for his stock.

"Oh, Lord!" exclaimed Aunt Emmy, "did he give you a receipt?"

"Why, of course, he was the nicest man. But Junior said after he left that he didn't like him. He said he looked slick. Boys are so funny. Well, I got the platinum stock but Mr. Barnes at the bank says it's no good. He must be mistaken. But I want my bonds back so I came to you for help. And you're always so lucky about your investments."

"Not lucky, just sensible," corrected Aunt Emmy. "Why, oh why don't you consult your banker, who understands finance before you risk your money? This is not your first loss. Remember that piece of land you bought that was under water?"

"That was different," said Mrs. Norris blushing, "and anyway, Mr. Stanhope is honest, I can tell that."

"If he were honest, he would not have promised you the things he promised. Reputable houses don't send out representatives who make promises about repurchase of stock. Why don't you 'phone your Mr. Stanhope?"

"I did, but he's out of town. I've written, too, but I suppose I shall have to wait until he gets back. It's been several weeks now, so he should be back soon."

Just then the evening paper came. Aunt Emmy glanced at it, then read it attentively. Her expression grew serious. She handed the paper to Mrs. Norris. On the front page was an account of a financial scandal. The house that sold Mrs. Norris her mining stock was involved and the men who ran the business had been indicted for fraud.—A. B. Aymes.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

On How to Lose Your Inheritance

"It is so hard for me to get along on what John left me," complained Mrs. Norris to Aunt Emmy. "Junior wants to get a job, but I always wanted him to go to college—"

"Yes, yes, I know," interrupted Aunt Emmy, "but what about this mining stock?"

"I'm coming to that. You see I thought I could invest some of those bonds John left, they yield such a tiny income, in something that would bring real money. I needed more money, so when the telephone rang that day and a man, he had the nicest voice, said he had been referred to me by a friend and wanted to talk over some gilt-edged investments, I told him to come right up."

"His name was Mr. Stanhope. He was so nice. He told me all about the big money people are making in platinum mines. Platinum jewelry is so fashionable now. He said he could let me have some stock in a wonderful mine, and that the company would buy the stock back if I ever wanted my money."

"Have you a statement signed by one of the officers of the mining company to the effect that the company will repurchase your stock?" asked Aunt Emmy.

"Why no—"

"Well, you will have trouble getting your money back. A company cannot be compelled to buy its own stock back."

"Oh, I don't know. Anyhow, I got out my bonds and showed them to him—"

"What, you keep your bonds in the house instead of at the bank!" exclaimed Aunt Emmy.

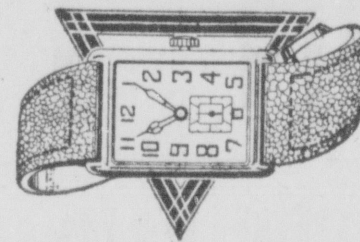

"Why, yes, but in a box that locks—"

ONLY WOMAN RULER IN INDIA RESIGNS

Begum of Bhopal Turns Job
Over to Son.

London.—India's only woman ruler, her highness the begum of Bhopal, has abdicated her throne in favor of her son, Nawab Zada Hamidulla. For a long time she had contended for the Islamic right to name her successor, who under ordinary procedure should have been the son of her deceased eldest son, Nawab Nasrulla Khan. The British government finally acceded to her desires.
The abdication of the begum brings to an end 25 years of female rule in the little state of central India of 6,902 square miles with a population of about 700,000. She had ruled Bhopal with vigor and statesmanship. Although now sixty-eight years old, she still is mentally and physically vigorous. Nevertheless she had long wished to see her only son established as her successor before her powers faltered.
Accordingly, she came to London last September with her son and his three young daughters to arrange matters with the British government. The necessity for the special arrangement lay in the fact that two elder sons, both of whom died in 1924, left sons, and the eldest son of her eldest son stood next in line of succession, according to the laws of primogeniture.

Nawab Zada Hamidulla is now thirty-one years old. He has been trained in statesmanship under his mother's direction. He was on the staff of the prince of Wales during the prince's recent visit to India and also served in the World war. He has a splendid reputation.
It is understood that if the government had not granted the begum's request to name her successor she would have remained on the throne rather than turn over the rule of Bhopal to a minor. Having succeeded in her efforts, she retires happily from the cares of government. She is still in England with her family, but will return to India.
The begum always has had the happiness of her people at heart, and is beloved by them. She adheres strictly to the rule of Islam, calling for women to conceal their faces.

War Game to Test
Air Defense of East

Washington.—Practical test of the coast defense value of aircraft against a modern fleet may form a part of the joint army-navy maneuvers to be held in August next year at Narragansett Bay.
Preliminary plans for the games have been made possible by an agreement in congress on the fuel item of the navy appropriation bill, which will permit the battle fleet to come into the Atlantic next spring.
Selection of the Narragansett bay area means that defenses of the northeastern frontier section are to be tested, with the major portion of the fleet on the attack. With the date set more than a year from now, both of the giant airplane carriers, Lexington and Saratoga, should be with the fleet, carrying a striking force of 231 fighting, bombing, torpedo and scouting planes with which the defenders will have to deal.
The east-coast games will afford the first opportunity for mobilization of the army air fleets to repel an attack by sea and air. Col. William Mitchell, former assistant army air chief, contended during the recent aviation controversy that an adequate air force could safeguard the coast line and dominate a 200-mile area off shore, preventing any hostile fleet commander from risking destruction within that distance.

"Lady Luck" Failed the Former German Kaiser

Berlin.—"Lady Luck," in addition to a large army, was regarded by the former kaiser as an important factor in the success or failure of his dreams of Germany as a world empire, judging from "good luck" emblems in the former imperial palace.
Above a gilded and intricately carved door leading from the sumptuously furnished anteroom connecting with the former kaiser's study, there hangs a rusty old horseshoe. It dangles on a rusty nail driven into the gilded portal under which the kaiser passed many times a day. The horseshoe was picked up by him more than twenty-five years ago while he was riding horseback in the Tiergarten.
The superstitious among his former subjects incline to the belief that the kaiser's dreams failed because the horseshoe was hung with the points down, instead of up.

Cost of Child First
18 Years Now $7,202

New York.—It costs $7,202 to rear a child during the first 18 years of its life, according to an estimate by an insurance company.
The total is divided as follows: Birth, $250; food, $2,500; clothing and shelter, $3,400; education, $1,150; health, $248; recreation, $130; insurance, $54; sundries, $570. These items, exclusive of $1,100 of the education bill, which the survey says the child may pay for itself, total $7,202.

OFFICES TO

Revenue Bureau Has No Further Use For 44 Branches.

Washington, June 14.—Forty-four branch offices of the Internal Revenue Bureau in eight states will be abandoned June 30 because of repeal of many war-time taxes has lightened the work of collections.
The order affects offices in Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Maine, Missouri, Montana, North Carolina and Virginia. Since April 15 other branch offices have been continued.
Where possible those employed in branch offices will be transferred, but there will be a considerable reduction in personnel.
The branch offices to be abolished June 30 include those at Lexington and Paducah, Ky.

"SILENT PAGE" IS THEATER NOVELTY

THE management of a theater in a middle Western city has solved one of the problems of both the theater and the theater-goer.

Frequently in every theater messages come to the box office for someone in the audience. Usually it has been necessary either to interrupt the performance long enough to make an announcement from the stage or wait until the curtain ends the act.

This enterprising Western theater owner, however, has adopted a plan which is better than either of the older methods. He has made an electrically illuminated and portable signboard and with this contrivance an attendant simply steps from the wings to the stage, flashes the message direct to the person wanted and that ends it.

The sign is made of a shallow square box with a stenciled face. The words "Wanted at the Office" are stenciled in the permanent, fixed portion of the face. The name of the person wanted can be stenciled quickly on a small slide and slipped into a groove above the permanent portion of the face. The message is made visible by a hand flashlight, so affixed to the bottom of the sign that its light is thrown directly into the box and in rear of the stenciled face.

The accompanying photograph shows the contrivance in action.

SCHOOL BOYS WIN PRIZES IN ESSAY WRITING CONTEST

David O. Speakman And Ralph Enoch Awarded Trips To Sesqui Centennial Celebration At Philadelphia---Subjects of Productions Were In Reference To Declaration of Independence---Both Were Students of Pickaway Township Centralized School.

The Pickaway county judging committee of the Sesqui-Centennial commission, composed of Judge Clarence Curtin and Joseph M. Lynch, of this city, and Miss Florence M. Teegardin, of Madison township, awarded prizes in the essay contest to David O. Speakman, a senior, and to Ralph Enoch. Each will receive a free trip to the Sesqui Centennial celebration in Philadelphia.

The committee received from the superintendent of the Circleville schools two essays upon the subject, "How has the Declaration of Independence Influenced the World;" and two essays upon the subject, "What the Declaration of Independence Means to Me," four in all.

The committee also received from the superintendent of the county schools four essays, two upon the subject "How has the Declaration of Independence Influenced the World, and two upon the subject, "What the Declaration of Independence Means to Me."

From these essays the winners were selected. The first named subject was assigned to high school students, and the latter to those in the elementary schools.

Both boys hail from the Pickaway township schools, and by winning this contest have added more laurels to the records of their school.

Its Influence

The essay of David O. Speakman on "How has the Declaration of Independence Influenced the World?" is as follows:

Independence! Revolution! Liberty! A number of men all of mixed nationalities upheld the Declaration of Independence, fought the Revolutionary war and gained their ideal of liberty. On their staff waved Old Glory, brought into existence by the Declaration of Independence and destined to represent a powerful and influential nation where democracy was to be practiced. Back of all were the words, "The Declaration of Independence," written on a sheet of paper by a pen held in the hand of a worthy man, and with him the principles to be practiced in the United States. These words bathed in the blood of our forefathers, washed in the tears of their relatives and friends, and dried by the flash of powder and the breath of dying men must surely have influenced the world very much in the past, and undoubtedly it has influenced the present state of affairs.

The Declaration of Independence gave to the world an ideal nation upholding the ideal equality of men. It affirmed the ideals to be practiced in a nation to be brought into existence by a revolution. It did not designate a number of laws, but it laid down the principles upon which a free nation should be based. Under these principles the United States has developed into a nation that today is one of the most influential republics among all nations. If the colonies had not declared their independence thru this document, the United States would not be the ideal land of democracy and would not possess the influence or the ascendancy required by an influential nation of the world.

The Declaration of Independence as an historical document must surely have influenced other nations in many ways. Other nations have overthrown their kings and have adopted the principles stated in this document when they reorganized their governments. Among these nations are France, Germany, Russia, Japan, China and the republics formed after the World war. Historians tell us that the United States and the Declaration of Independence had a great deal to do with the overthrow of the monarchs in the old countries and that they undoubtedly caused the republics that were created to choose and practice our form of government.

In many nations "about the heads of all the martyrs of liberty is the halo of hope and the Declaration of Independence is the fulfillment of dreams," writes one enthusiast liberty-loving man of a foreign nation. This document not only influenced the revolution, but it has influenced all mankind in general. This republic as a world power is an attraction to all human races, and surely no slight effect must have resulted from the fact that among all civilized people the Declaration of Independence caued political success to be based on the natural rights of man. Binkley says, "Even France was unable to withstand the general feeling" imparted in the Declaration of Independence, and historians declare that the general influence on the people of France was indeed remarkable.

Elsewhere in many lands it has been cited as a model for political conduct.

The Declaration of Independence was a declaration of freedom from all bondage to England. While England controlled the colonies, she restricted their rights, but when America gained her independence, the people were free to develop this nation and thru freedom our country has gained in power. As a free nation, the United States is one of the most influential nations in the development of the industrial and commercial problems that face the world, and in the political affairs her influence is supreme. Since our nation was free to govern herself, she was naturally free to develop and improve the industrial and commercial conditions in the world. By invention and experimentation, the United States has created new industries, established trade with other countries, made transportation more cheaply and more easily accomplished, and in this way she has as a free nation improved the living conditions all over the world by developing her resources and influencing the economical development of the world problems and supplying the needs of a growing population.

In the political affairs of the world, the United States, as a free nation, holds a secure and influential place. There are many different kinds of political affairs that our nation and its document of freedom could influence. There are conferences between nations, peace and war negotiations, and the natural rights of the human and a country. The Americans who have taken part in these affairs loved and respected the Declaration of Independence, upheld the natural rights of men, and so they respected liberty and justice, and naturally their opinions were based on them. In this way the Declaration of Independence has influenced the lives and rights of many people in the world, and all the nations have been influenced by their opinions and their one great document.

In the Civil war the rights of the human being were the immediate causes of a bloody struggle. The Monroe Doctrine that protects the republics of Central and South America, was written by a man who represented a nation brought into existence by the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution of the United States protects and governs one hundred and twenty million people who have inherited the spirit imparted in the Declaration of Independence and who are daily influencing and have influenced the whole world by upholding the ideal, that political success should be based on the natural rights of men.

I cannot predict the future, but the past and present influence of our great document is far-reaching, not only in political parties, but in every human heart as well. If the multitude would uphold their ideal independence and equality of men, all nations would be free, all wills unbound and in the world no war, strife, hate or jealousy; but peace, love hope and faith would triumph, and the liberty bells of all nations could ring on to the tune, independence, equality of men, and peace and harmony on earth, the result.

Which It Means.

The essay of Ralph Enoch on the subject, "What the Declaration of Independence means to me," was as follows: The Declaration of Independence is the foundation upon which our nation was built. If the foundation is built of poor material, the building totters and falls. The same could be said of a nation. If our principles or foundation had been wrong, we could not have endured this one hundred and fifty years.

When we stop to think, it seems wonderful that our forefathers back in 1776 should have established principles of right and wrong that are a part of our system today. In those days of tyranny and oppression, when kings claimed to rule by divine right of God; and when the common people of Europe took such things for granted, the pioneers of a new world were looking farther into the future, and paving the way for a new reign, a reign where the common people could be masters of their country.

It was no small thing for those men to do. They risked their lives when they signed their names to that document of freedom. Did they know the risk they were taking? Yes, they were wise to the fact that the king could declare them traitors to the mother country and give them over to the fate of a traitor.

Today, America is pointed to as the "Land of Promise." People of all nations look to us for freedom, a place where they can forget their failures and start all over again. And, indeed, it is true, for here we can engage in any industry ever thought or heard of. Do you very often hear of people giving up because they failed in one occupation? No, because they know they are free to try something new, and, perhaps, better suited to them.

If our forefathers had not been brave enough to sign the Declaration of Independence, we would probably still belong to England. Can you imagine much freedom for the colonies? If we were under England's control we would be forced to obey their laws. Our country would not be free to elect our own officers and heads of the state and nation. Do you think we could be proud of a ruler some other nation had selected to rule over us?

Then, too, if we were under England's control, we would not be the commercial nation we are today, for England would not allow us to carry on trade with any other country. We would not have the manufacturing industries that would dare to compete with England's booming industry. Goods from England would be much cheaper, and naturally we would buy from her.

Our nation is sometimes called the "Melting Pot" of the world. The people of all classes and nations are thrown together here and under the influence of our country's laws, freedom and protection, usually turn out to be good Americans. With such a mixture of people it is quite natural that we would be a nation of many ideas and thought. There is a demand, always, for something new to meet the needs of the people. This demand leads to invention.

The United States leads the world in invention. The Declaration of Independence tells us that all men are born free and equal. This statement gives us the wonderful idea that there is nothing to block our goal. We may go as far as we have the will power and ambition to carry us. How could the great men and women we study in history, have shown the world what they could do without the Declaration of Independence and its message? So, I do not feel like I am boasting when I say that we will probably never realize what the Declaration of Independence is worth to us.

HARTMAN THEATER.

"In Love With Love," a romantic comedy, will be presented next week by the Hartman stock company at Hartman theater, Columbus, as the ninth play of the summer season. This popular comedy was first produced under the name of "Love and Learn," by George Cohan and Ruth Shepley, new leading lady of the company, created the leading role in it. Before it came to New York, Mr. Cohan had another idea and he launched a new play "Two Fellows and a Girl," and put Miss Shepley in the leading role in it. "Love and Learn" was changed to "In Love With Love" and produced by William Harris at the Ritz theater, New York, where it had a long and profitable run.

Lynne Fontaine, Ralph Morgan and Henry Hull (Lenore Ulric's leading man) played the three chief roles in it and it was one of the successes of Broadway. Ruth Shepley will be seen in the Lynne Fontaine part, which she originally created; Donn Coon will have the Ralph Morgan role, a splendid role—that of a young bridge builder; and Neil McFee will have the Henry Hull part.

The story is one of the cleverest and most romantic of any play yet presented here. One of the finest scenes in the play is when Donn Cook, as the bridge builder, demonstrates with his tiny bridge model, just how bridges work. It is all done on a dark stage, with tiny lights on the miniature bridge. William Ingersoll, Gilberta Faust, John Lott, Georgia Neese, Elise Bristol, Martha Lee Manners and Forrest Orr will all have good roles and it is a foregone conclusion that "In Love With Love" will have the population of Columbus in love with it before the week's engagement is over.

Matinees on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Ladies may purchase orchestra seats on Monday nights for 50 cents. Allen Hale's orchestra plays for dancing in the foyer thirty minutes before the play and during intermissions. Season reservations may still be made to assure good locations each week.

CRIME WAVE?

It could hardly be called that.

Yet, many a time it has been said that it is a crime to let shoes go too long before having them resoled.

Lots of good repairable shoes are lying around inactive that could be repaired and would give long additional service. This is almost criminal waste.

It is practically criminal waste to buy cheap, unrepairable shoes. our

AMUSEMENTS

Boys and girls, there's a thrill waiting for you down at the Met theater. It comes along in the fifth reel of "Dance Madness," and such a love scene you have never fastened your eyes upon in your whole lives. I know I never have, and I've seen just about every picture worth seeing since the early DeMille-bathtub period.

Lovely Claire Windsor and Conrad Nagel have the leading roles in "Dance Madness" which Robert Z. Leonard directed. You know Nagel has always been a "home boy" before but would you believe it, he actually leaves his wife in the quest of a masked Russian dancer. It's a typical Lew Cody part, and Conrad is a positive "wow" in the role. These Elinor Glyn heroes that our Conrad has been playing lately have certainly made him a changed man.

And Claire Windsor, girls, is the loveliest thing ever, and you know that is a real compliment when it comes from one of the weaker sex. Even the girls in the theater stopped to admire her face when they could get their eyes off her clothes. As "May Anderson" she displays a wardrobe that would pay the European National debt with four per cent interest, and the best part of it is that many of the creations she wears can copied right here in Circleville.

I know you'll adore Hedda Hopper as the Russian dancer, "Valentina." If I could walk down two flights of stairs as gracefully as Hedda can, I would have attained my life's ambition. And that crooked smile of hers! If there is such a thing as reincarnation, I only hope that I can be half as charming as Miss Hopper.

If you have seen "Sally, Irene and Mary," you'll remember Douglas Gilmore, and if you haven't, here's the chance of a lifetime. He's a new face in pictures, but we venture to say that he'll be one of the most popular men on the screen in a year or two. He continues on his devastating way in "Dance Madness."

Mario Carillo plays "Stokoff," and is exceptionally good in the part. The picture was directed by Robert Z. Leonard and is one of the loviest to look at of the season.

WILL ARRANGE FOR LEGION CONVENTION

Col. Vincent A. Carroll of Philadelphia, national vice commander of the American Legion, was handed a big job recently when the Philadelphia county committee of the Legion named him as chairman of the Philadelphia national convention committee.

As chairman of this important committee Colonel Carroll faces the gigantic task of accommodating any entertaining more than 50,000 American Legionnaires who will attend the eighth national convention at Philadelphia. The Legion national meeting this year will be held in connection with the celebration at Philadelphia in honor of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

To assist in the work, Colonel Carroll selected the following Legionnaires as chairmen of the subcommittees to assist him: J. Borton Weeks, parking; Judge J. Willis Martin, reception and distinguished guests; Miss Anna L. Hawkins, registration and information; Theodore Rosen, decorations; John M. Dervin, transportation; James R. Rose, hotels and housing; James F. Ryan, convention hall and seating; Louis Stepin, badges and trophies; George Wentworth Carr, program; Glendon T. Tongue, radio; Mrs. William H. Belter, Jr., auxiliary, and Virgil Baldi, Forty-and-Eight.

H. Harrison Smith and E. E. Holenback were elected vice chairmen. The Legion meeting this year, October 11 to 15, will be replete with historic interest. Among the historic scenes the visiting Legionnaires will see are Independence hall, the Betsy Ross house, Carpenter's hall, the grave of Benjamin Franklin. Old

Col. Vincent A. Carroll.

Christ church and other memorials scattered throughout the city and its environs from Valley Forge to Brandywine Springs.

Colonel Carroll's service in the World War was significant. He attended the first officers' training camp and was commissioned a second lieutenant. Promotions came to him fast overseas with the Seventy-ninth division, and when he was discharged he wore the gold leaf of a major on his shoulders. He is now a colonel in the reserve officers' corps.

His Legion service began when the Legion itself began. He organized a Legion post in Philadelphia in 1919 and served as its first commander. Since that time he has held various offices in the county and state Legion organization. At Omaha in 1925 his Legion service was recognized and rewarded when his comrades elevated him to one of the highest offices in the Legion, national vice commander.

First Raido Unit Has Been Granted Charter

The first radio unit of the American Legion auxiliary was recently chartered at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma Radio Unit No. 300. It is the auxiliary of Radio post of the Legion.

Membership in the unique unit is limited to eligibles who live where there is no live auxiliary unit. It is said ownership of a radio is one of the requirements of membership.

The unit will broadcast weekly meetings and an entertainment program every Monday night from station KFJF (261 meters), Oklahoma City. The unit plans to entertain disabled veterans by broadcasting programs for their benefit.

"Mountain Canaries" Not to Be Molested

Lovers of American "bird" life recently wrote department officials of the American Legion of Colorado protesting the proposed plan of the Legionnaires of Colorado to carry "Rocky mountain canaries" to the Legion national convention at Philadelphia, October 11-15.

It is understood that the Legionnaires have agreed to allow the "canaries" of the Rocky mountains—commonly known as burros—to remain to "warble" in their native Colorado haunts.

TERSE TRIFLES

Books are canned intellect.

Success is a form of nervousness.

Age wears away the vice of vanity.

Danger will wink at opportunity.—Milton.

How much is fear and how much is conscience?

Science never thinks it knows more than it does.

A man can seldom wear a silly hat and make good.

No town is so small that it doesn't hear the current jokes.

It's easy to be patient when you have nothing at stake.

Condor Flies High

The condor is the world's largest bird and is also the highest flyer. It has been known to fly at 20,000 feet, whereas the average bird only reaches 300 feet.

Rusted Blades

Long-standing rust can be removed from knife blades by sticking them upright in an onion and leaving them for some time. The blades will then clean with ordinary scouring.

FUNDS AVAILABLE IN THE BUCKEYE

Owners of 5% Certificates of Deposit, which are issued for large or small amounts, are privileged to withdraw their money at any time.

If money is allowed to remain for six-month periods, interest to date is included.

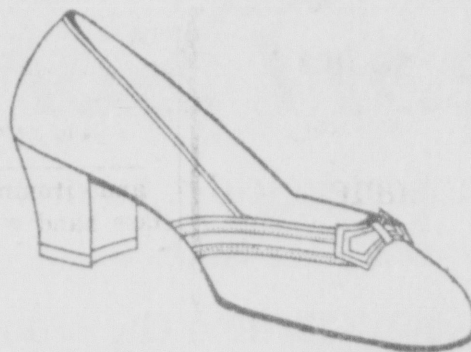

The advantage of THE BUCKEYE'S 5% Certificates of Deposit is that they are always worth full value; in no wise subject to fluctuation.

They may be used as collateral, in case money is needed temporarily, without disturbing the interest.

WHERE LAW IS LAW

England's new penal code which went into effect June the first raises the penalty for drunken motorists to four months' imprisonment, or a fine of two hundred and fifty dollars, or both, together with a year's suspension of the license of those convicted.

The rigor of the law becomes the more meaningful by virtue of its certainty. The English, whom we sometimes tax with want of humor, do lack American comedy in the enforcement of statutes and the protection of human life. They are serious in dealing with thugs and murderers. They do not smile indulgently when a red-handed slayer is brought to book; they try him in all soberness and hang him in all earnestness. They do not consider law a thing to be prattled about or dallied with by cunning masters of technicality; they respect it as the shield and sword of justice. All this may have something to do with the fact that the homicide rate in England is considerably less than one per cent per hundred thousand of the population, whereas in the United States of America it is seven and two-tenths.

There will be few drunken motorists in the United Kingdom, not simply because the new penalty is sharp, but chiefly because it is swift and sure.—Atlanta Journal.

YOU CAN'T HIDE A FARM IN A SAFE DEPOSIT BOX

"How much would you take for your farm?"

"It isn't for sale."

"Don't blame you! If I had it I wouldn't want to sell."

"Did you ever stop to think that you might be forced to sell or mortgage the place, to hand the money over to someone who was injured by one of your cars?"

"You know how crowded the highways are. You run the risk of accident every time one of your cars leaves the yard. I say you, because, no matter who may be driving the car at the time of the accident, you, as owner, will be the man held responsible."

"Right after an accident there is a distinct disadvantage in owning a prosperous farm. It cannot be conveniently hidden in a safe deposit box. It is evident to all who pass. As a consequence, if someone is injured by one of your cars, he's likely to say to himself: 'That fellow is good for any judgment I can get against him. I might as well ask for a large sum.' And suddenly you find yourself sue for $25,000 or $50,000."

Would you care to have a jury of twelve men, picked up here and there around the county, deciding whether or not you should keep your farm?

"Even if the claimant is not given all he asked, you would have been put to the great worry and expense of defending the suit; during which time your regular work is sure to suffer."

"Let me fix you up with Automobile insurance, which will protect your interests if an automobile damage suit is brought against you; pay the court and defense costs, if the case goes to court, and protect your farm, by paying the judgment up to the limits of your policy, if one is rendered against you."

BEST GAME OF SEASON

Was Won By F. O. Eagles Sunday When They Defeated M. & M Specials By Score of 3 To 1.

The F. O. E. team won over the M. & M. Specials of Columbus, Sunday by a score of 3 to 1. The game was very well contested, both sides making sensational plays and the close score made it anybody's game right up to the finish.

The Columbus score came in the fourth inning, the first man up grounded to first, then Holderle smacked the ball for two bases, Fearing hit the ball on the nose to right, McCollister making a nice running catch with his gloved hand. Holderle then attempted to steal third, the catcher's throw was wide and bounded off the third baseman's glove, Holderle coming all the way home on the play with the first run of the game.

Circleville came right back in the second half of the inning. The Columbus pitcher made the fatal mistake of walking the first man up, Pettit promptly sacrificed him to second, Terry went out, short to first; Hanson scored the tying run on Orahod's hit between short and third, he taking second on the throw in. Orahod scored on a passed ball.

In the eighth Terry hit to left and scored on Orahod's third liner to right which the fielder failed to hold.

Both pitchers kept the hits well scattered, not allowing over one hit to any one inning.

Fashion and Elephants

The fashionable woman's passion for rings and bracelets made from elephant's hair set in precious metal is being followed up by a craze for all sorts of "elephant novelties." It is the desire of every woman to have elephants carved from ivory round about her, either one or a regiment of elephants.

See Potato Buyers Victims of Tricks

Much Substitution of Varieties by Dealers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Potato growers who purchase seed potatoes do not always get the particular varieties they order. There is so much substitution of varieties by seed potato dealers that the growers are seeking the passage of control measures which will correct the evil. Substitutions, either careless or willful, are more apt to be made, says William Stuart, potato specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, for the newer or less known varieties. Purchasers who order "fancy names" or "new and highly advertised" varieties are more likely to be victimized, he says, than those who stick to the widely known varieties.

Mr. Stuart ordered 139 different varieties last year from 61 different seedsmen. Many firms replied that they were "just out" of that particular variety. Of the 98 named varieties that were received, 25 per cent proved to be varieties other than those specified in the order. In one instance, three varieties were ordered from a dealer advertising himself as "reliable." Three different packages were received, all of which proved to be the same variety, but not of any one of the three varieties ordered.

Tomatoes Easy to Raise If Carefully Cared For

Tomatoes are easy to raise if they are carefully cared for. They can be planted in seed plots, kept in the basement near the furnace, and be replanted in the garden as soon as the danger of frost has passed. And early ripe tomatoes bring fancy prices on the market. They are one of the best-paying vegetables that can be raised the country over, says a writer in the Successful Farming.

When the transplanted plants have again taken root and begin to branch out, most varieties require frames about them to prevent the branches from being broken by the weight of the green tomatoes.

All that is necessary is a lot of light lumber of narrow widths, cut to the same lengths and nailed to stakes driven into the ground, there being four around each plant.

As the dry weather sets in, if it does, build small mounds of earth about the base of each stalk. This not only braces the whole plant, but places the roots deeper in the ground and there is less likelihood of any damage from drought.

Formalin Is Effective Against Scab of Potato

Formalin is effective against common potato scab and is used at the rate of 1 pint formalin to 30 gallons of water. Seed should be soaked from 1/4 to 1 1/2 hours, then spread out to dry before replacing in containers. Either use new containers or be sure that the old ones are sterilized. Formalin treatment will not control black scurf.

Corrosive sublimate treatment will control both scab and black scurf. Use 4 ounces corrosive sublimate to 30 gallons water. Seed should be soaked 1/2 to 1 1/2 or 2 hours, depending on the severity of black scurf infection. Tubers should be whole and dormant when treated by either method.

Trees Are Valuable for Any Unproductive Land

The United States forest service during the years of 1910-11 planted 23 acres of western yellow pine and Douglas fir in the vicinity of Colorado Springs.

In 1926, just 16 years later, the forest service has realized $2,500 from this acreage in thinnings alone, and at the same time has left 500 trees to the acre for a future crop. These 500 trees which have been left will prove the most valuable financially for lumber purposes.

Farmers should plant those unproductive acres to trees and later realize a cash return from them.—Chester A. Lee, Extension Forester, Colorado Agricultural College.

Farm Hints

Alfalfa hay, home-grown grain, and pure-bred sires spell dairy success.

Screens around the dairy early in spring mean less flies later in the year.

The first grass is watery and poor feed for stock; and the stock are also hard on the first grass.

Legumes such as sweet clover and alfalfa cannot grow in acid soil. That is why farmers are putting lime on their soils.

Millet smut may be entirely prevented by giving the copper carbonate dust treatment, the same as for sorghum smut.

The junior club boy of today will be the farmer of tomorrow so why not watch with interest the way he cares for his calf, pig, or colt?

Farmers who notice the cream test decreasing needn't worry as that is logical with the heavily increased milk flow. They are just getting more milk and less butterfat.

WEEDS CAUSE MANY INQUIRIES

Field cress and yellow rocket, two weeds of the mustard family, are attracting much attention, judging from the many inquiries coming to the Ohio Experiment Station, is to mow off the tops before seeds mature. As they are propagated from the seed only, one or two years of thorough work will eradicate them from the farm.

Both weeds are either annuals or biennials, producing seeds the first year or forming a rosette of leaves the first year and seeds the second year.

Field cress is an erect leafy light green plant, often producing five or six branches from one root stalk. It has a white thickened tap root and is topped by closely set, small white flowers. Yellow rocket is often mistaken for common mustard which it resembles, although it blossoms much earlier.

Fairy Finance

"Fairy money" is the name given fantastically to "found" money, the assumption being that a good fairy placed it there for the benefit of the finder. But there is no mention of the bad fairy who made the original owner of the money lose it!

FUNERAL OF MRS. PLUM

The funeral of the late Mrs. Celestia Plum was held from her late home in Walnut township, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. Gale F. Hanover of the Baptist church, Amanda, officiating, and was largely attended by relatives and friends of deceased. The interment was in beautiful Reber Hill cemetery, the pall bearers being Messrs. Alvin, Clinton, Julian, Henry and Orrin Blue and Charles Dresbach.

Expansion in Babies

Chests for Children

A small chest proves a very handy article in the children's room. It is especially fine as a storage for toys and trinkets, for it is low and easy for a child to use. Then, too, it is not stationary and can be moved about the room to the most convenient spot.

Plenty of Style in Africa

An American artist finds more well-dressed women in Algiers, Northern Africa, than anywhere he has been since he left the States. The Algerians bob their hair, use little rouge, wear their skirts just below the knees and do not roll their stockings. Then by way of contrast a few miles away is the unspoiled oasts town of Bou Saada, which looks just as it did to Abraham. During his week's stay there the artist was the only English-speaking person in the place. Why should this town be untouched by fashion and the other out-Paris Paris? Probably Algiers is more cosmopolitan.—Capper's Weekly.

Eat Less and Live Longer, Says Lawyer

By W. W. O'BRIEN

(Noted Criminal Lawyer of Chicago.)

Business and professional men working under high nervous pressure do not live as long as men whose pursuits keep them out of doors and active. Examine the records of longevity and you will find that on the average the longest-lived men are soldiers, sailors and farmers, all avocations which tend to keep a man at his physical best.

Man, in general, rolls down the hill of life fastest when his figure is rotund. "Leanness and longevity" is a good axiom for business men to remember. If office workers would eat a little less, they would add years to their lives.

Overfeeding is as dangerous to adults as underfeeding is to children. Foods difficult to digest, or which overstimulate, should be avoided by persons whose work does not require any particular amount of physical exercise. Yet thousands of business men eat as much as or more than men who do manual labor. And, inevitably, nature rebels and sickness results.

Many of the country's foremost executives eat but two meals a day, breakfast and dinner in the evening. They seek to keep the organs of the body from becoming clogged. Thousands of other business men confine themselves at noontime to custards, puddings, soups and other sustaining dishes made with milk, or evaporated milk, which is milk in its most sterile form, from which 80 per cent of the water has been removed by evaporation. Such a diet is light and readily assimilated.

There is no more necessary lesson to be learned by the brain worker than how to keep well and healthy by proper attention to food habits.

THE CONTEST WILL BE LIVELY

Granges of Pennsylvania and Ohio Pitted Against Each Other.

It is a lively contest which has developed between the Granges of Pennsylvania and Ohio to end September 30, and which is designated as an "efficiency contest" with a regular basis of scoring and enlisting the co-operation of subordinate units in both these states. The fact that each state has a membership of about 100,000 Patrons and in the vicinity of 900 subordinate Granges apiece assures the keenest rivalry. State Masters Dewey and Caton are both live rural leaders and the outcome is being keenly watched throughout all rural sections of the two states.

Great summer field meetings will constitute prominent features in the battle, while both states are looking forward to the most enthusiastic annual sessions the coming fall that they have ever had.

CHAPEL IS ARRANGED AS FEAT- URE OF SESQUI

Will Be Devoted To Prayer and Meditation Rather Than Religious Services.

A chapel devoted to prayer and meditation rather than to set religious services, and which will be the sanctuary of all creeds and denominations, is an important feature of the Palace of Education and Social Economy at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, which opened in Philadelphia June 1 and will continue until December 1.

Located to the left of the entrance to the palace, the sanctuary will seat 350 persons. A compelling feature of the room is the medieval stained-glass rose window back of the altar, and valued at $10,000. On either side of it are two stained-glass windows of floral design, which recently were displayed at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. The walls are paneled with paintings showing the influence of religion on the human race.

From the dark blue and gold ceiling of the room are suspended exquisite Gothic chandeliers designed by the late Stanford White. The chapel is without pulpit, lecturn or reading desk. No religious symbols typifying denominational or creedal differences are there, but the altar is banked with fresh flowers each day.

Not All Built Alike

We are apt to form our opinions and pass judgment in the spirit of one whose life is ideal, and entertain no possibility of any one else not being equally favored. Yet we know that every life has its own environment, hence its own viewpoint.—Grit.

Mistletoe Misses

Dora and Violet, both sweet seventeen, were confiding to each other their views on life in general and flirting in particular.

"Really," said Dora, "I think parents are sometimes most inconsiderate and unreasonable."

"Of course they are!" agreed Violet, who remembered her mother's recent lecture on flirting. "But to what are you particularly referring?"

"Why, everybody is unreasonable about kissing. They only begin to think it's wrong for a girl to allow herself to be kissed under the mistletoe when she is just old enough for it to be interesting!"—Grit.

Woman's "Second Leisure"

There comes a time in most women's lives when the children are grown that there is a let-down in life's responsibilities. That time I call the "second leisure." It is a blessing for such women to have an interest in something outside their home. It keeps them young. And their energies which have been heretofore employed in rearing a family, if they are harnessed, can be made of infinite use to the world and joy to themselves.—Congresswoman Kahn of California.

Sent the Wrong Letter

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

ELEANOR SMITH took the letters from the postman and distributed them among her family just leaving the breakfast table.

"And one for me," smiled Eleanor happily, flying out of the door to read it in her own room. As she settled down among the cushions of her big chair she scanned the envelope amusedly.

"Mel was in a terrible hurry to get this off," she commented tearing it open. "He has used his business stationery, and calls me 'Miss Nelly Smith'—why such haste, young man?" opening the single sheet of paper which bore Melville Allen's embossed letter-head.

Eleanor's bright face clouded as she read the brief formal words, and when she had finished she sat there pale and still, her dark eyes puzzled and full of trouble.

My Dear Madam:—the letter read.

Your note of the third inst. is before me, and after due consideration, I have decided that the matter of your property rights should be brought before my colleague, Judge Henry Parks, who is now out of the city. Upon his return he will write to you immediately.

Very truly yours,
MELVILLE ALLEN.

That was all—every bit of the letter he had written in reply to her warm little note reproaching him for not coming to see her—she had even suggested, playfully, that their engagement invested her with some right to a portion of his time—and she had said some very loving things about the past, present and future and was his "always, Eleanor."

"And this is his answer," muttered Eleanor suddenly breaking into a little tempest of sobs. "The horrid mean thing! To refer me to Judge Parks—crusty old man—what does he mean?"

"I will find out for myself," declared the indignant Miss Smith, hurrying into her most becoming suit and powdering her pink nose with vicious little dabs. "If Mel Allen thinks just because I wear his ring that he can send me an impertinent letter, he is mistaken. Jealous, I suppose, because I lunched with Judge Parks at the club last Saturday!"

Another passenger was waiting for the elevator, a tall severe-looking elderly woman who had emerged from a handsome motor car just as Eleanor reached the "Lawyers Building." They ascended in the elevator, two stern-faced women, and it was a coincidence that they both left the car at the eleventh floor and entered the law office of Parks & Allen together. An office boy ushered the other woman into Judge Parks' private office and Eleanor was led to Melville's door.

She knocked softly and in answer to his voice she turned the knob and entered, closing the door after her.

Melville, looking immaculate as usual, jumped up to greet her.

"Eleanor—you darling!" This is a surprise," he cried, then drawing back as she withheld her hand, and stood coldly aloof, "What has happened?"

"Nothing has happened except that I have received your letter," she said with cold emphasis on every word.

Mel reddened. "I thought that was a pretty good letter."

"It was very clear," said Eleanor bringing out the missive.

"What is the matter with this letter?" he wanted to know as he pulled it out of the envelope and began to read. It is very probable that Mel discovered the trouble at once for his face changed from red to white and back again to red, his expression became grim.

"This is the wrong letter," he announced stiffly. "It is intended for one of our clients."

Eleanor looked relieved and still doubtful, but just then the door opened and Judge Parks appeared with the severe lady.

"Excuse me, Allen," said the judge after he had greeted Eleanor warmly. "Miss Nelly Smith is here complaining about some letter that you have written to her—I have explained to her that the letter was probably intended for another lady—little Miss Eleanor, here—eh?"

"Eleanor has received the note intended for Miss Nelly Smith—and she doesn't understand it," said Mel with a sickly grin.

The judge roared and Miss Nelly Smith smiled.

"It was addressed to me," faltered Eleanor, "and so I thought—"

At that moment Miss Nelly Smith put into Eleanor's hand a very fat envelope. "It made me feel quite young again, dear," she whispered. "You are a lucky girl."

As the two whispered there, the judge was poking his young partner with a pudgy forefinger. "See here, Mel, Miss Nelly has promised to marry me—yes, we're going the rest of the road together, and you've set me an example in writing love letters that I cannot follow—and at first I think she believed I had written it."

After all explanations had been made and the engagement of Miss Nelly and the judge had been formally announced, Melville and Eleanor found themselves alone. Mel held out his hands. "I've been a careless idiot, Eleanor, will you forgive me?"

Eleanor eyed him appealingly. "I've got to get out of this bramblebush," she murmured guiltily.

"Jump," he teased with a tender note in his voice.

And the "jump" landed her in Mel's arms.
